Master of Science in Nursing Science

Program Student Learning Outcomes for PMH-NP and FNP students

The graduate is prepared to:

- Engage in scholarly inquiry, including evaluation and application of evidence-based research to advanced nursing practice or leadership.
- Practice in a manner that incorporates ethical, legal, and professional standards for advanced nursing practice or nursing leadership.
- Collaborate across disciplines and in partnership with communities, groups, families and individuals through culturally sensitive practice.
- Demonstrate competence and caring in the professional nurse role to serve as a provider, leader, and educator in the health care system.
- Articulate a plan for self-directed, lifelong learning and professional development.

Program Student Learning Outcomes for NLDR-Educ Students

- Apply scholarly inquiry, nursing and educational theory and knowledge, and evidence-based research to nursing practice.
- Collaborate across disciplines and in partnership with health care and academic institutions to improve health.
- Use emerging information, health technologies, and healthcare data to promote safety and quality care to improve health.
- Apply advanced leadership skills, professional ethics, and knowledge of policy to improve health.
- Design and assess an evidence-based nursing education curriculum.
- Integrate best practices in nursing education to provide quality learning experiences for diverse populations.
- Create a plan for self-directed, lifelong learning and professional development.